Goppert Issues $100,000 Challenge

Clarence Goppert

larence Goppert, Missouri businessman and longtime Avila College supporter, has challenged Avila's alumni and friends with a $100,000 grant to the college's Annual Fund. To complete the challenge, $300,000 in undesignated money must be contributed to the Annual Fund by alumni and friends by June 30, 1988.

Mr. Goppert said that though he had never attended Avila, "I believe so deeply in its mission of quality education that I welcome the opportunity to invest in its future."

Clarence and Vita Goppert have made several major gifts to the college including funds to support the construction of Goppert Theatre and the purchase of an administrative computer system. Vita Goppert is a former Avila trustee.

"This challenge is especially important to the college at this time," said Dr. Larry Kramer, Avila president. "Although we are not involved in a campaign this year, the financial needs of the institution are steadily increasing. Successful completion of Mr. Goppert's challenge will allow us to maintain our quality educational programs and develop an increased donor base for the future. We are very grateful for Mr. Goppert's generosity now and in the past."

In response to the challenge, students, staff and alumni volunteers are conducting a direct mail and phonothon campaign under the direction of the advancement office.

Advancement Update

 The President's Scholarship Club is gearing up for a January phonothon to increase membership contributions. Competing teams will ensure a lively campaign!

Recent gifts and grants have been received from J.C. Penney Company ($2,000), The Kansas City Star Company ($1,500), Kansas City Southern ($5,000), J.B. Reynolds ($5,000) and Union Pacific ($10,000). Notification of a grant of $15,000 also was received from the Hearst Foundation. These gifts are gratefully acknowledged.

 Persons who can't resist filet mignon and the chance to bid on over 30 super prizes are invited to contact the advancement office about attending this year's American Royal Dinner/Auction on January 22. Guests are promised an evening of fun — all for the benefit of Avila's students.

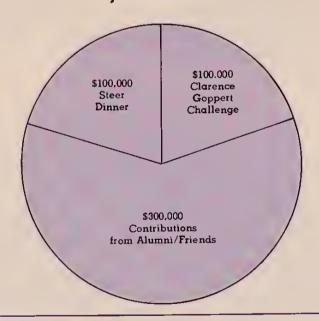

Dan Larson to Head New Humanities Dept.

Daniel Larson

1987-88 Annual Fund Goal - $500,000 (Undesignated Funds)

Projected Revenue

he new academic year welcomed the creation of a new Department of Humanities for Avila College. This department combined the former Departments of Performing and Visual Arts, Modern Languages and Philosophy and Religious Studies.

According to Daniel Paul Larson, newly appointed department chairperson, "The richness and cultural depth offered through this new department will provide Avila with the knowledge and accomplishments of past masters and with experiences essential for growth today."

The humanities department and the recently approved core curriculum which increased humanities requirements reflect a renewed emphasis in the humanities. This places Avila in a leadership position, answering the call to reform higher education with a new emphasis.

Larson, a native of New York, received his bachelors and masters degrees at the Eastman School of Music of the University of Rochester. Currently, he is finishing his doctoral dissertation at the Conservatory of Music of the University of Missouri-Kansas City. Larson was appointed to the Avila faculty in August 1977 and became coordinator of the music division in the fall 1983.

President's Column:

Plans and Models Build Avila's Future

fanning at Avila is taking on exciting new dimen sions. We have recently completed the North Central Self-Study Report and are preparing for the accrediting team's visit in February.

We have also just completed a strategic planning model that will soon be used throughout the college. And, fater this year, Avila will conduct a feasibility study among constituents to prepare for our next fund-raising campaign.

The North Central Self-Study confirmed that we have a fine college that is providing important services to our students, but it also showed the college is under-funded. Since our largest fiscal resource is tuition, action needs to be taken to increase enrollment. We must also increase gift Information provided by the North Central report has been funneled into the strategic planning process to come up with a goal in response to the problem of under-funding. The goal: "To insure the quality of Avila's learning environment, we shalf strategize means to stabilize and build enrollment.

Each college unit will focus on ways it can achieve the goal. The strategic planning process wilf continue annually, with each unit setting goals and objectives for the next

Solving the other part of the resource problem means developing increased gift and grant revenue. A feasibility study will be conducted in the first half of 1988 that will ask you, our constituents, what kind of institution you want Avila to be in the future. This research will be added to North Central information and serve as a basis for strategic planning in luture years.

Our success in drawing this information together and implementing our strategic plan will depend on all of us who have an interest in Avifa. We will need your hefp. When you have the opportunity, we hope you will participate in college events, volunteer for college boards, help us promote Avila in the community, and let us know your hopes and dreams for Avila's future.

The chaflenge of planning for action makes this an exciting time to be associated with Avila.

Challenge Grant Sets Stage for American Royal Steer Dinner

he Twelfth Annual American Royal Steer Dinner, scheduled for Friday, January 22, has been given a solid financial boost. Five donors have pledged $10,000 each toward a $50,000 chaflenge to bidders and guests. Total proceeds from the dinner and auction will be used to match the $50,000 challenge.

The 1988 Steer Dinner challengers are Jack and Edna Bear, Ken and Claudia Bergeron, Kathfeen Borserme, Catherin Merrill and John and Mary Beth Meyers.

"We are eagerly anticipating this year's Steer Dinner," said Pat Martin, director of development. "It is always an exciting evening and the $50,000 challenge virtually guarantees that this will be our most profitable dinner/auction to date.

Martin added: "We are deeply grateful to the Steer Dinner Challenge group. They have demonstrated a real support and concern for Avila's students.

Avila's Steer Dinners were launched in 1977 when a syndicate of benefactors composed of Henry Bloch, Robert Boyfe, John Latshaw, George Powell, Jr., and Gordon Wells purchased "Jimmie C", the American Royal Grand Champion Steer for the first dinner auction.

Two internationally known auctioneers — George Morse, initially, and Stanley Stout, in recent years — have contributed their services to ensure the success of the auction over these efeven years.

As in previous years, the event will feature a lively auction of award-winning American Royal steaks and other selected prizes.

Planning for Avila

As one who believes in the mission of Avila Coffege, you can help ensure the future education of students by making a planned gift. For information please calf (816) 942-8400, extension 327. DiCarlos to Chair Annual Steer Dinner

Vince and Marifee DiCarlo have been named honorary co-chairs of the 1988 American Royal Steer Dinner to be held on Avila's campus Friday, January 22. The DiCarfos, who are in the construction business in Kansas City, were invited to serve in this capacity in recognition of their past association with, and generous support of, the annual Vince DiCarlo, who has been an active member of the Steer Dinner planning committee for several years, said: The Steer Dinner has become a tradition for both Avila and the community. It is a class event that Marifee and I are proud to be a part of."

DiCarlo added: "Anyone interested in supporting Avifa's students and having a fun evening at the same time should contact the advancement office for tickets."

Patriots Clash in Constitutional Debate

Chris Kuehl as Patrick Henry

Patrick Henry and Alexander Hamilton debated the U.S. Constitution at Avila. Or so it seemed. Actually, Avila faculty members Steve Mosher and Chris Kuehl played Henry and Hamilton, respectively, during a debate sponsored by the public administration and political science programs to celebrate the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

Asked if he favored the adoption of the new constitution, "Hamilton" said that "It would create a united country instead of a squabbfing collection of states as experienced under the Articles of Confederation."

"Henry", in opposition, said: "I smell a rat." He contended the new constitution provided too much power for the central government in areas such as taxation and military matters. It also omitted a bill of rights.

The gentlemen were also guestioned on the terms of office for the President and the Senate. Hamilton favored fifetime positions but Henry feared this would re-establish a monarchy. He favored a short term of office similar to that of efected officials on the state level.

Hamilton said he opposed slavery and asked the convention to abolish it. Henry, a Virginian, said slavery was an economic necessity and that he was satisfied the constitution did not address it.

Questioned about the rofe of women in the new government, both gentlemen reflected their eighteenth century prejudices. They said the place for women was in the home, "definitely not in government".

Seeks Brass Doorplate

Donovan Becomes Avila Ombudsman

Dr. Ed Donovan, associate professor of biology, has been appointed to the new position of Avifa ombudsman lor the appeal of academic matters. The ombudsman organizes and provides impartial hearings for grade appeals.

Asked about his new role on campus, Donovan replied with tongue in cheek: "First of alf, a name change is in order. Let's change that clumpy title to the 'Office of the O.M.B.'." He added that such a distinguished title should be accompanied with a "big new olfice and a brass deep fate."

An ex-marine, Donovan also felt the need for a flag and a suitable emblem, "something like a big silver eagle on a blue background. After all, the IRS has an eagle."

Donovan acknowledged that his scientific background tells him chances are slim that the college budget includes these amenities. Consequently, he plans to remain in Room 210 - O'Riefly Half without flag, brass doorplate or emblem and "hopes to be of service to students and laculty alike."

Reflections

Bill Lovell

Bill Lovell, Avila's business manager for the last seven years, is retiring. Mr. Lovell shares his thoughts and memories about Avila in this edition's Reflection column.

Being part of the Avila community has given me a sense of satisfaction. It made me become involved in the process of educating students — something I missed while working in private industry.

It has been special to work with the dedicated people at Avila. The Sisters of St. Joseph set high standards when they started Avila and I have found faculty and staff committed to maintaining these standards.

The most significant change I have seen at Avila was the selection of the first fay president for the coflege. Dr. Larry Kramer had the awesome responsibility of succeeding Sister Olive Louise in this position. I consider it a privilege to have worked with two such capable chief executive officers.

The most difficult time for me at Avila was the installation of the first computer in 1982. This required many long and frustrating hours of evening and weekend work but resulted in a better system for information storage.

My fondest memories are the good relationships I experienced with a loyal staff of employees who have worked lor me. I will miss the sense of fellowship with the members of the Avila community. We have shared joys and sorrows which are a part of life and provide many rich, warm memories.

Avila's philosophy and mission make it a unique institution. Its Christian environment, emphasizing the value and worth of each individual, is a quality I shall cherish as I think of Avila in years to come.

Avalanche Soccer Team Wins National Berth

Scott Anderson. Avila forward, lends off Rockhurst defender in 1-0 soccer victory over traditional rival Rockhurst on September 27. Coach Scott Royaf-Ferris' team linished an outstanding regular season with a 16-4-2 record and capped district play with a second win over Rockhurst, this time a 2-0 victory in the district linaf. Entering the national NAIA tournament, the Avalanche record was 18-4-2.

Avila Basketball: A Rookie and a Vet

A veteran and a newcomer will handle coaching duties for the Avila Avalanche basketbaff teams this year. Dennis Joyce begins his sixth year as head coach of the men's program while Buddy Soloff wilf coach the women's team in his initial season.

The men's team features top returning seniors Ken Dudzik, Edmond, Okla.; Chris Houston, Oklahoma City, Okla.; and Mike McCollow, Minneapolis, Minn. Wes Gibson of Kansas City O'Hara High School is the top returning undercfassman. The team roster also includes the following players: Darren Bennett, Craig Bergeron, Darren Noah, Kevin Dudzik, Jason Barr, Steve Neidenbach, Ron Brown and Jeff Stapleton.

Coach Joyce, who has led Avila to the District 16 playoff three of the past five years, said: "Quickness is the most improved aspect of our game. We will continue to run the fast break and play tough man-to-man defense. Our major concern wiff be our ability to rebound with bigger teams."

Joyce said Avila has a strong schedule, including traditional rivals Rockhurst, William Jewell and Central Missouri State University.

Coach Sofoff has successfully coached AAU baskethalf for twenty years. The women's team is coming off a season in which they set a single season win record (21-8). Returning starters include junior Diane McLaury of Kansas City O'Hara High School; junior Jennifer Yarshen, Naperville, Ill.; sophomore Adrian Pendelton, Junction City; and sophomore Karen Kinney, Independence. Also pfaying: Debbie Amos, Jennifer Lee, Micki Shaw, Tina Caldwell, Angefia Smith, Jackie Goodman, Sharon O'Reilly and Susan Putz

Early season predictions of top opponents for the women's team include Rockhurst, Missouri Western, and School of the Ozarks.

An Avila Education is a Valuable Investment

It still pays to get a college education.

A recent Census Bureau report, "What's It Worth? Educational Background and Economic Status: Spring 1984," notes that only 21% of Americans have a college degree, but they are the ones with the highest income. In fact, there is a $1,235 per month difference between the average monthly earning power of a college graduate ($2,288) and that of a high school graduage ($1,045).

"In this time of rising college costs, the greatest challenge is in retaining the value and quality of education, and then making that value affordable," said James Millard, Avila's director of admissions.

Millard said Avila remains an outstanding educational buy. "The College Board says the average 1987-88 yearly tuition at a 4-year private coflege is $7,110. Avila's current tuition is $5,100.

Cindy Butler, Avila's director of financial aid, encourages families to explore all possible ways to offset tuition costs, "Many freshmen, transfer and returning students are eligible for some lorm of aid. Academic scholarships; federaf, state and institutional grants; workstudy jobs and the college's guaranteed tuition plan are some of the different avenues available to hefp linance a coflege education." Butler added that "when these opportunities are explored, linal college costs are often much less than families expect."

Both Millard and Butler believe that an Avila education remains within reach of any qualified student who desires it. Millard said, "As a Catholic, private institution, Avila has always taken great pride in providing an excellent, value-centered education. We are continuing to try to make that value alfordable."

Classrooms Fill Up For Weekend Study

Do you want to fearn about jazz, photography, computers, classic films or real estate, but just can't find the time during the busy work week?

Avila's Weekend College has the answer to this dilemma. Each weekend, hundreds of students attend classes in a variety of subjects ranging from Legal Rights of Women to Effective Business Speaking. Some students work toward a degree while others use Weekend College courses to enrich their lives.

David Wissman, director of Weekend College, said:

"There is increasing interest in the weekend colfege concept nationwide with about 100 such programs in operation. Avila has been a leader in this region in providing this type of educational opportunity."

The convenience of Weekend College seems to be a factor in increasing enrollment. "Students remark that this is the only way they could continue their education and hold down a full-time job," noted Wissman. "We feel thedemand for this unique educational service will only increase in the future.

Nursing Students Use Latest Equipment

Student nurses at work

Avila's Department of Nursing bas renovated its Nursing Learning Resources Center. Improvements were funded by a grant from the Helene Fuld Heafth Trust, a New Yorkbased foundation.

The resources center bas been transformed into a simulator with four main areas. A fully functional nurses' station comes complete with a sink, computer order system, telephones and a call system. Patient rooms provide quick-connect oxygen, air and vacuum outlets, adjustable bed lighting, wall-mounted blood pressure meters, beat lamps, bedside telephones, and a nurse call simulator areas include a medication cart and a corridor complete with handrail, public address system, prerecorded hospital background sounds, and the usual corridor clutter.

Questions designed to stimulate student thinking and response have been scripted and videotaped for each area. The simulator can provide an atmosphere ranging from near-serenity to full-scale crisis.

Audiovisual equipment is available for student use in the new lab design in various formats. Skills such as nursepatient communication, dealing with death and grief, and other nursing care activities are reinforced by audiovisual materials

Guests are welcome to visit the Nursing Learning Resources Center. They will see one of the linest facilities of its kind in the Kansas City area.

Students Help Out in Kansas City and Mexico

Avila students have vofunteered to lend a hand with two different philanthropy projects this fall - one in the Kansas City area and one in Mexico.

For the second consecutive year, students, faculty and staff vofunteered to renovate homes of the elderly, disabled and needy as part of the Kansas City "Christmas in October" neighborhood project. The Avila team joined over 3,000 volunteers in renovating more than 250 homes.

Beth Maren, coordinator of Avila's volunteers for the project, recalled one homeowner, with tears in her eyes, saying "Now I really know there must be a Santa Claus." In a second outreach activity, 10 to 15 Avila students will return to Cuauhtemoc, Mexico, during Christmas break to live with needy families. For many of the students, this will be their second straight Christmas with these families. While there, they will install plumbing systems, weatherproof houses and provide information on health and nutrition. The trip will be supported by funds donated by Avila Faculty and staff.

Instructor's Photographs Are Patrons' Rewards

by Diane Covert

Diane Covert, Avila photography instructor since 1983, bas been selected by the Missouri Arts Council to have her work incorporated into the 1988 Missouri Arts Award. This prestigious award is presented annually to six influential patrons of the arts in Missouri.

This year marked the first time that photographers were invited to participate in the design competition. Covert's work was selected from among her peers across the state

Covert received a Master of Applied Arts/National Education Association photography fellowship in 1983. The Missouri Arts Council and the Society for Contemporary Photography presented her with a Creative Artist Award in 1986.

Sharon Exposito:

New Alumni President Reflects on Her Experience

Sharon Exposito

I want to thank each alum for the opportunity to serve as the president of the alumni board. With your support, the next board will continue in the tradition of excellence here at Avila.

The past four years on the alumni board have been a privilege as well as a great learning experience — an experience that helped me understand the internal workings that make Avila College such a great place to be.

The many people I have come in contact with exemplify the quality one would expect from a college such as Avila. I am proud Avila has maintained high standards in an environment that has become much more challenging and competitive for private colleges. The support of each and every alum will be increasingly important as faculty and staff strive to maintain those standards.

More information on college and alumni activities will be available to you through this expanded Accent. Please take every opportunity to participate in the continuing life of your alma mater and, if you have ideas on how your alumni board can serve you better, please let me know.

Stan Thompson, Pete Lenge and Dale Carver. Dan Clark, tournament co-chair, and Dan Sudeikis won closest-to-the-pin honors for the men; and Henrietta Ghilino shared closest-to-the-pin laurels for women. Longest putt honors went to Al Palmer while Dan Cates and Mary Ellen Clark got off the longest drives. For the second straight year. Jim Kealing won the putting contest.

Volunteer in Haiti Sees Overwhelming Need for Dental Care

Dr. Jan Woerth, Avila's program coordinator for continuing education and director of the Women's Leadership Institute, recently spent nine days in Haiti as a member of a team of Methodist dental and health care missionaries.

Woerth said special precautions were taken by the missionary team as a result of the prevalence of AIDS among the Haitians. "Before we left the United States, our group decided that we should assume that every patient might be a victim or carrier of the disease," she said. "We all wore protective glasses, masks and gloves. In fact, I wore two pairs of gloves at all times because it is easy to pierce the gloves when handling needles." In one village, there was particular concern because the team observed the kinds of sores and other symptoms commonly associated with AIDS.

The team's clinic consisted of a thatched-roof hut on poles with an uneven dirt floor. Their two dental stations consisted of a chair for the patient and a table for instruments. Portable church pews became the waiting room.

More villagers responded than could be treated. More than 200 patients appeared for dental care the first day, but Woerth said they were able to treat only 50 of them. By the end of their stay, the volunteers had treated 239 patients and extracted 529 teetb. At least 100 other patients were awaiting treatment when time ran out.

"We would have had to work every day for a month to bave met all their dental needs," Woerth said. "After being in the midst of such extreme poverty, you really appreciate all that we have in the United States. I am grateful for having had the opportunity to help people who are so appreciative and are in such terrible need."

Outstanding Alumna Earns Praise for Dedicated Service

Nancy Barr, Class of '75, bas been named Avila's Outstanding Alumna for 1987. President Larry Kramer conferred the honor at Avila's annual bomecoming brunch on October 6. Ms. Barr, who has served as president for the last two years of both the Missouri Nurses Association and Avila's Alumni Association, was praised for her dedication to the community, her profession and to the mission of the college.

President Kramer commented on the difficult choice faced by the Alumni Association's selection committee. He described Nancy Barr as an excellent example of the high quality of Avila's graduates.

Diverse Student Body Offers Avila Community Bouquet of Lifestyles and Cultures

majority of Avila's students can finish their last class of the week, throw appetites and dirty clothes into their car, and head home to mom and dad for a weekend or short vacation. Most of these traditional students are single, less than 21 years old and are from Kansas or Missouri.

There are other students, however, to whom going home is a major event. Catching a plane for Karachi or Seoul is no small commitment of time or expense. Still other students — a fairly sizable number — have families and jobs besides attending school full time.

Accent talked to three students who don't fit the traditional mold. We asked about how they got here, what they liked and disliked about Avila and the U.S. and their plans for the future.

Jun Ho

Home: Seoul, South Korea

Year: sophomore

Majors: pre-med and chemistry

Likes about Avila: friendly and informed faculty; genuine caring for individuals

Dislikes about Avila: sometimes yearns for larger campus

Jun Ha was born in South Korea, lived in Japan and attended Barstow High School in Kansas City before coming to Avila. Jun, who wants to be a surgeon, says there is a misunderstanding on the part of some of his American classmates concerning his intense study habits. "All Asian students don't study their heads off. In fact, once a Japanese or Korean student is accepted in college in their homeland, I think they study less than an American student would."

"The difference is I am here on a student visa. My staying here depends upon my academic success. That tends to motivate," he said.

Sports are one of Jun's great loves. He was a Korean little leaguer but "couldn't hit the curve ball well enough to advance in baseball." He is a fan of the Royals and enjoys football, hockey and soccer.

David Ramsay, Tasneem Bader and Jun Ha

Tasneem Bader

Home: Karachi, Pakistan

Year: senior

Majors: pre-med and chemistry

Likes about Avila: Catholic college with discipline, variety of student activities; concern and kindness of Sisters of St. Joseph and others make it a second home

Dislikes about Avila: being away from closeknit family and friends.

"Tassie" Bader is fluent in six languages, has a 3.9 grade point average (4.0 is the highest possible) and was given a presidential medal in Pakistan for her academic achievements. She could have attended college in Europe or Japan but chose the United States because of the "heterogeneous society and culturally rich environment."

"The United States system of education has challenged me," Tassie said. "I have enjoyed the competition. The United States has always been perceived abroad as the land of opportunity. In my case that has certainly been true."

Tassie hopes to be admitted to medical school next year at the University of Kansas. "I have made many friends here and would like to stay in the area."

Tassie's brother is a senior medical student in Pakistan. Her father works for the United Nations and her mother is a college dean.

A painter by trade, David broke both wrists and sustained other serious injuries when he fell from a ladder several years ago. Although he was incapacitated for three years and lost mobility in his left wrist, David says "it was God's way of helping me find a new direction in my life."

Through the help of state vocational rehabilitation funds and the "great support of an excellent college faculty and advisor in public administration," David has prepared himself lor another career. "I have always maintained that attitude is a big key and that you need to be willing to prepare for whatever you are going to do," David said "I couldn't have been better prepared for the changing world of health care than I was at Avila."

Avila Elders: College For the Joy of It

For most college seniors, the degree at the end of the academic year is all-important. For one group of college seniors at Avila, though, earning a degree is secondary. For the senior adults enrolled in Avila's College for Elders program, learning is the primary reason for attending school.

Each class they attend is specially designed for adults $5 and over. Instructors are members of the college faculty and specialists from outside the college community. Class subjects include financial investing, computers, history, writing, art, dance and exercise. All classes are affordably priced at $30 each.

Participants have discovered that the program provides an excellent avenue to pursue the joy of learning. The next five-week session begins in January. For more information about class dates and times, call Avila's continuing education program at 942-8400, extension 280.

Accent on Avila College is published quarterly.
